

Students' concerns grow as bus strike arrives

By Anna Lee Macdonald

"What's new? There's a bus strike?" That was one student's reply when asked about the busmen's union strike that began Nov. 1.

For other students, dependence on buses to get to and from school, even more intense about the strike and what it might mean, was a different story.

Lisa Macdonald, a first-year business management student, said her first reaction was, "There can't be any work!" She couldn't see how a school strike has to end

Ann Harris, a third-year business student and co-president of the student union, was angry when she first heard about the strike. "The bus strike is a big deal. Does this mean the union will be organized after the strike is ended?" There was also concern about how to get to school in the morning.

Ann Harris' reaction about the bus strike, agreed with Harris. "It's not as if the bus system was working that great to begin with. Even if the bus, you still have to drive around the city. And if you have a car, you still have to wait at least 30 minutes for

4 groups to elect board members

By Tracy Macdonald

For the first time, students at Conestoga College will have the right to elect their representatives to the board of governors in a college-wide election.

Conestoga College's board of governors is a body that oversees the college's operations. It is made up of representatives from the college's four faculties, the college's administration, and the college's students.

One student member is elected to represent each of the four faculties. The other three members are elected by the college's administration.

The election will be held on November 14. Students will vote for their representatives in a secret ballot. The results will be announced on November 15.
